Kozminski University is a non-public higher education institution with a broad business profile (management, finance and economics, law), recognized as the best business school in Central and Eastern Europe according to the "Financial Times" rankings. According to the "Perspektywy" national ranking, KU is also the leader among business universities in Poland and for many years it has been ranked first among non-public institutions. KU also has the three most important international business education accreditations - the so-called "Triple Crown": EQUIS, AMBA and AACSB, which only 6 percent of business schools worldwide have, including such universities as Yale and Harvard University. KU is the first and, so far, the only university in Poland to have set the UN Sustainable Development Goals.
